Good Summer Questions

While musing early in the twelfth century about how he began his now classic treatise “The Moral Ark of Noah,” Hugh of Saint Victor wrote, “When I was one day sitting with the assembled brethren, and replying to the questions they asked, many matters came up for discussion. Finally the conversation was so directed that we began with one accord to marvel at the instability and restlessness of the human heart and to sigh over it. And the brethren earnestly entreated that they might be shown the cause of these unstable movements in man’s heart, and further particularly begged to be taught if such a serious evil as this could be countered by any skill or by the practice of some discipline.” Hugh is rich in images, but always grounded in the text. He offers an answer.

After noting that salvation is by grace, but that God loves to see a cheerful response to His grace, and before moving on to the Ark itself, Hugh helpfully describes God’s House as three distinct spheres, each within the prior, aiming for the constancy first requested. “God inhabits the whole world in one way, the Church in another, and every faithful soul in yet a third. He is in the world as a ruler of His kingdom; He is in the Church as head of a family in His own home; He is in the soul as the bridegroom in the wedding-chamber. The heathen and the unbelievers are all of them in His house—that is, in His kingdom; for through the power of His Godhead He maintains and governs all that He has made. False believers are in His house—that is, in the Church; for He entrusts participation in His mysteries to all whom He has called to faith. But the truly faithful are in His house, or rather I should say ARE His house, because by indwelling in them through love He owns and rules them.”

This third house becomes Hugh’s Ark of the soul. Build Him an ark in the soul; become an ark for God’s love and wisdom, and seek His inner presence. “We are all His house by our very created condition. We are in His house through the faith whereby He called us. We are in His house through the love whereby He justified us. If you are in the house of God by your origin only, the devil is there too along with you. If you are in the house of God by faith, there is still chaff on your threshing-floor together with the wheat. But if you are in the house of God through love, blessed are you, for not only are you IN the house of God, but you yourself have begun to BE His house, to the intent that He who made you may also dwell in you.” The wavering heart will find its cure with love for God.

Hugh had earlier discussed four related arks: of Noah, of the Church, of Wisdom, and of mother grace. The decks of the Ark of the Church come into service, the lowest being those wholly carnal, next the divided, then the desiring, and finally the glorified. Where are you? Where were you five years ago? The stability asked after by the brothers pertains more to the arks of grace and wisdom. Would you like to build an Ark of your soul? Is summer refreshment forming “Christ in You”?

Jesus is at the helm—let’s go sailing!

True Righteousness – Lactantius

Although righteousness unites all the virtues, two in particular can never be separated from it—piety and equity.... If piety is knowing God and the culmination of knowing God is worshipping Him, then obviously those who don't know God don't know righteousness. For how can we know righteousness if we don't know its source? ... The other part of justice is equity. Obviously I'm not talking about the equity of judging well (although this is praiseworthy), but of making oneself equal to others.... For God, who produces and gives breath to people, desired that all should be equally matched. He has placed the same life conditions on everyone; He has given everyone wisdom. No one is prevented from receiving His heavenly benefits. For He gives light, water, food, and the most pleasant rest of sleep to everyone. In the same way, He grants everyone equity and virtue. In His eyes, no one is a slave and no one is a master. For, if we all have the same Father, by an equal right we are all His children. No one is poor in God's sight except the unrighteous. No one is rich except those filled with virtue.
